How the ultimate working habitat enhances employee experience

The power to work from anywhere has permanently transformed the professional environment.

100% of organizations surveyed in IDC 2022 Future of Work Trends have adopted, or plan to adopt, a hybrid work model.¹

And by 2024, companies that provide remote collaboration, process automation and similar tools will increase revenue by.²

Employees need working habitats to support them. Such as digital workplace solutions that enhance productivity and innovation.

75% of employees say they are more productive while working from home.³

20%

A growing list of business priorities

The hybrid working trend piles pressure on CEOs and CIOs. Not only must they meet business targets for:

Productivity

Cost

Efficiency

They must supply and manage the latest software, security, support and solutions, and mitigate risks when connecting to unsecured networks, whilst nurturing and maintaining their employees.

85% And today, 85% of CIOs are working more closely with HR teams than they did in 2019.⁴

Why? Because hybrid work is a deciding factor in attracting and retaining skilled workers.

Top talent is in short supply

By 2030, 85 million jobs could go unfilled because there aren't enough skilled people to take them.⁵

70% of employees prefer to have the option of working remotely.⁶

39% of the workforce could be lost in businesses unwilling to meet expectations for flexible work.⁷

By 2024, businesses could see

20% revenue loss due to talent attrition and underperforming teams, as a result of inadequate hybrid work provisioning.⁸

Improving employee experience affects broader business outcomes

Accelerate your user experience transformation using intelligent IT management. This will also help you develop the ability to scale skills, technology and security while taking greater control of budgets and increasing productivity.

60% of ITDMs saw more than 10% improvement in user experience scores by focusing on satisfaction with technology. And those efforts generated $5 return for every $1 spent.⁹

60% of technology and business leaders indicate that improving employee experience is a top IT priority in 2023.¹⁰
